Dear Don,

I haven't said thank you for the book list. I may have read about a third of them. I will work on the rest, especially the ones you recommend. I am just finishing REPORT TO GRECO, Cazantzakis. Too bad Ernest didn't stay alive long enough to read it. He would have related to the thoughts as friends. There is a place on page 145 that explains to a degree why Ernest wrote so many lies.

In the story I wrote as a child about the seed, I had it trying to decide whether to grow up toward the sun where it wanted to go, or down into the earth where it didn't. It went toward the sun, but soon died because it didn't have any roots. That is the way I feel this morning. I have been going too far toward the sun in my mind and need to spend some time on just living. If you don't have a letter for a couple of weeks, ~~I will~~ think nothing of it. I will be growing some roots.

Until then,

Marge -
