

Feb. 8, 1967

Dear Marjorie:

I am very dumb I think. I should not have pushed you so far — just because you were willing. But it was such a surprise and joy to have unquibbling and seemingly limitless answers in the mainstream of my work — and on such happy and interested and befriending terms — that I did the usual human thing. I was greedy and thoughtless and went too damn far. It's a wonder I didn't ask for a complete record of your private thoughts — and actually I guess I came close to that. Well enough. You have your vacation. No more prying, mewing questions for awhile and then perhaps — well there were a couple more things. [you: "My lord, is there to be no end?"] I meant while I am still working on the pig. It is taking a little longer because I have been advised to soak some of the matter off the backs of the important ones. This causes no harm, as you know. You have given me enough material to gnaw over for awhile. I have for all of it, including the last rec'd today on geology. (Don't turn that up.) Oh yes, please thank Mrs. Barker for her essay. It is very helpful. I now sign off for awhile. And hope you bid your cards when you get in. Well miss you. Love

Feb. 8, 1967

Dear Marjorie:

I am very dumb I think. I should not have pushed you so far — just because you were willing. But it was such a surprise and joy to have unquibbling and seemingly limitless answers in the mainstream of my work — and on such happy and interested and befriending terms — that I did the usual human thing. I was greedy and thoughtless and went too damn far. It's a wonder I didn't ask for a complete record of your private thoughts — and actually I guess I came close to that. Well enough. You have your vacation. No more prying, mewing questions for awhile and then perhaps — well there were a couple more things. [you: "My lord, is there to be no end?"] I mean while I am still working on the pig. It is taking a little longer because I have been advised to soak some of the matter off the backs of the important ones. This causes no harm, as you know. You have given me enough material to gnaw over for awhile. I have for all of it, including the last rec'd today on geology. (Don't turn that up.) Oh yes, please thank Mrs. Barker for her essay. It is very helpful. I now sign off for awhile. And hope you bid your cards when you get in. Well miss you. Love